Identity Of Animal At Southern Is, Probably Police Dog-Coyote Hybrid

Two weeks ago this campus was saying that they had a grey timber wolf in captivity. Numerous comments were being made as to whether it would be stuffed and placed in the Museum or kept as a mascot. Now the identity of the animal is in doubt.

Dr. Mohr of the Wild Life Survey for this state inspected the animal about a week ago and was of the opinion that it is a cross between a German police dog and a coyote. Dr. Lee R. Dice of the University of Michigan has agreed with this, and his decision is true, then the animal is an extremely rare specimen.

Mr. John Allen of Southern's Museum said that it will be kept in captivity for study and experimentation through breeding to verify whether it is an animal of the opinion that it is a cross between a German police dog and a coyote. Dr. Lee R. Dice of the University of Michigan has agreed with this, and his decision is true, then the animal is an extremely rare specimen.

Mr. John Allen of Southern's Museum said that it will be kept in captivity for study and experimentation through breeding to verify whether it is an animal of the opinion that it is a cross between a German police dog and a coyote.

The other animal in question is kept in a cage and is growing wider by degrees. It was captured near Karnak by Horrell Brooks, who, knowing Allen's interest in the rare and unusual, called him and offered him the animal. Allen transported the catch in his car to the University Farm, where Irvin Pettiman, supervisor of the farm, has since cared for it. Pettiman handled the animal during the first few weeks of captivity, but has since refrained from approaching it.

Students in the genetics department of Southern are vitally interested in the outcome of the experimentation in breeding which may for the first time prove conclusively the mating of German police dogs and coyotes.

One farmer surprised the pack in a raid on his chickens and fired a shot-gun at them with no visible results. Other farmers in the region who raise sheep in the vicinity have run out of business.

You Can Believe This If You Want To

Have you heard of the scientist Francis A. Giannini? Undoubtedly most of the students have not heard of this person; but, doubtless, all of us have heard about the man Copernicus who formulated our present conception of the universe. Well, Francis A. Giannini may be held in as great esteem by our posterity as we today hold the name of Copernicus. The Copernican theory of the universe was a challenge to the best minds of his day and the theory which Francis A. Giannini proposes may also afford the greatest challenge to today's thinkers.

If this theory is disproved; and, if it turns out to be one of those mental excursions which intellectuals habitually indulge in; at any rate, his challenge has afforded a challenge and the scientific attitude demands that we accept challenges.

Suppose one could start from Cincinnati and walk north up to Chicago, from Chicago into Canada and on. "So what?" does the reader suggest? Well, suppose further, suppose that a person could keep on walking in a northerly direction and walk to Saturn or Mars? "Absurd," the reader says—"fantastic." Well at last one distinguished scientist says that it can be done. Francis A. Giannini contends that there is a direct land path from the Antarctic region to Mars and that one could travel to Venus, Saturn, Mars, or the other planets by moving in a northerly or southerly direction. His theory states that there are no northern or southern regions to this earth we live on. Professions to this earth we live on are those mathematically prescribed; and Giannini asserts that recent discoveries of Adm. Byrd confirm his revolutionary ideas. Byrd's expedition has uncovered vast land regions heretofore unknown and there has even been reported that there were sighted creatures 15 to 20 feet long and of yellow color (these creatures may turn out to be mythical creatures from Mars). Byrd himself has stated "that areas beyond the Pole from Little America is the center of the unknown."

Francis A. Giannini conceives of this universe together with the earth as an enormous doughnut or a rim of a wheel and the north and south pole are no more than assumed ending places. The article in last Sunday's Globe Democrat emphasizes Giannini's argument that our human eye is a deceiver, that, because we see Copernicus everyone assumes that the sun met the sky because that was the way it appeared, and so, he says that we hold our Copernican concept today because we cannot accept what we see.

On being asked to review book, "The Earth," by Abraham Lincoln, expressed this sentiment: "For those who like this kind of book, this is the kind of book they will like."

Who's Who About Campus

by Bill Price

To graduating seniors, senior week is the final hurdle they have had in sight for four long years. To the college as a whole, senior week represents a loss of many capable, talented, and popular students.

DICK AVIS

Richard Avis, graduating senior from Johnston City, president of the student council, president of the Student Body, member of the Little Theatre organization, and a member of Southern Knights will truly be a loss to the student activities and school organization at Southern.

Richard's popularity among his classmates has been illustrated all through his college career. He was president of his sophomore class. He was captain of Southern's track team in 1946. He was listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" for the year 1946-47. He has lettered in cross country and track.

His most interesting vacation during his college career was spent at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich., in July and August of 1946. That summer he was a counselor for junior boys (the youngest group sent to this camp). He enjoyed this vacation primarily because of his interest in helping young boys in the music and recreationally. Dick is 100 percent behind the coming Spring Carnival and hopes that the student council can make it an annual affair at Southern.

He is in the college of education and is majoring in mathematics and minoring in physics and sociology.

STUDENT COUNCIL PROBES WAGE LAW

An investigation of the present $35 per hour minimum wage law on campus was launched by Bill Burns, freshman representative at the Tuesday meeting of the student council this week. A committee consisting of Kenneth Hedges, senior, Bill Burns, Madelyn Fisher, freshman, and Bob Winegarner, senior, was appointed to look into the matter, especially the legal aspects.

A committee was also appointed to communicate with Dean His key regarding the student handbook to be published next year. The dean has requested that the student council collaborate in the compilation of this publication. Members of this committee are Walter Clark, freshman, Dick Avis, senior and chairman, Ethe Pajack, freshman, and Bob Winegarner, senior.

Preliminary action is under way in preparation of the Honors Day program. Pins are being selected, and a special assembly will probably be called for the occasion.

SENIORS AND GRADUATE STUDENTS

A large number of graduate schools recommend and many require that the student apply the year Record Examination be submitted as one of the credentials for admission. These examinations will be given May 5th and 6th. Registrations must be received before noon Thursday, April 10. For Particular contact M. S. Hickey, Dean of Men.

NOTICE

Commerce Club meeting will be held Tuesday, April 8, in Main 800. Mr. Wallace, Carbondale business man will speak. All commerce students are urged to attend.

Lorena Drummond, Native Of Texas, Is Information Service Director

by Bill Welch

Careers are often started by some small incident in a person's life. Such seems to be the case with Miss Lorena Drummond, director of Information Service at Southern. She became interested in writing when she won third place in a short story contest sponsored by the Texas High School Press Conference.

Miss Drummond was born on a farm near Childress, Texas. She entered the University of Texas where she joined the staff of the Daily Texas but, instead of completing her major in journalism, she was awarded a bachelor's degree in English. She later finished her requirements for a major in journalism.

In her third year in school, Miss Drummond accepted a position in the University of Texas publicity office. Lorena was advanced to assistant to the director of publicity. For a year she was a staff writer for the American Statesman, an Austin, Texas, daily.

In 1946, she was appointed acting director of the University of Texas publicity office where she was instrumental in changing the name of the office to information service.

She came to Southern in November, 1946, as director of Information Service. This office is responsible for the news and announcements which the school sends to the press.

She became editor of the College Public Relations magazine, official organ of the American College Public Relations Association after she arrived at Southern. She is also a member of Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary and professional journalism fraternity for women. She is also a member of the student publication council, on the president's advisory council, and serves as chairman of the radio committee.

The Southern Illinois Editorial Association voted the Information Service office as their headquarters.

Advise and consultant on public relations for the faculty, she works with student publications as a member of the student publication council, on the president's advisory council, and serves as chairman of the radio committee.

quarters after Miss Drummond invited them to have their convention on the Southern campus last June.

Miss Drummond feels that living with her mother in her home on west Chautauque is the nearest thing to contentment that she had in life. Her mother, Mrs. J. Z. Drummond, has a charming personality and is a likeable person.

Miss Drummond likes reading mystery books, playing a fast hand of bridge, seeing a good movie, going on picnics, and giving informal parties at home.

For six weeks each Home Economics major and minor must live in the Home Management House located at 309 Harwood Avenue. Here the girls live in one family under the direction of Mrs. Gladys Babcock. On a cooperative basis, they do the buying, cooking, entertaining, and other household duties. The girls pool expenses, take turns about performing the various duties.

The girls living at the home are usually seniors, having had three terms of food preparation and one term of nutrition.

The girls living at the home the first six weeks of this term according to Mrs. Lucy K. Woody, chairman of the Home Economics department, are Marilyn Becht of Maywood, Millie Opden of Carbondale, Helen Davis of Johnston City, Jacqueline Harris of Galatia, Jewel Trainer of Wolf Lake, and Laura Baker of Raleigh.

The entire chorus sang "Dear Old Woman" as an encore.

Fulkerson Gives Delta Rho Address

Eight students became members of the honorary mathematics fraternity Delta Rho at the annual Founders' Day Banquet held at the University Cafeteria Wednesday, March 26 at 6:30 p.m.

Ruth Sprankel, gave the Honor Address on the subject "Vector Proof of the Desargues Theorem." Each year the department of mathematics selects a senior to give the Honor Address at the Founders' Day banquet. Mr. Fulkerson used the method of vector analysis, which he studied in training for his commission as Army Air Corps Lieutenant in meteorology, to prove the Desargues theorem, basic in projective geometry.

Bosley Addresses Education Group

Dr. Howard Bosley, associate professor of education and director of Wheeler Library, was one of the main speakers at the Illinois Conference on Rural Education, held at Springfield on Mar. 14.

A specialist in school administration, Dr. Bosley urged legislative enactment in developing consolidation and improvement in Illinois' administrative units. Dr. Bosley cited that at present Illinois has 11,900 administrative units in comparison with the total of 11 other states being 969. He pointed out that large administrative units of 100 or more teachers are progressive or more teachers and that the quality of education be improved.

When we got bored we trip over to the library—not to study, but to browse. The crowd is small. Perhaps the library seems dull and dusty, but we got a distinct pick-up the day we found Emily post's Etiquette. We had to pick it up to find out why it was so popular. It was a book that had been around for a long time. It was a book that had been around for a long time. It was a book that had been around for a long time.

We'd like to shake the hand of Associate Justice Frank J. Murphy. But the crowd is small. Perhaps the library seems dull and dusty, but we got a distinct pick-up the day we found Emily post's Etiquette. We had to pick it up to find out why it was so popular. It was a book that had been around for a long time. It was a book that had been around for a long time. It was a book that had been around for a long time.

You Can Stop Worrying Now... They Aren't Looking For You

How many cars pass through the intersection at Main and Illinois during the day? From which direction does most of the traffic come? Seeking the answers to these questions, 27 members of Dr. Maurice Maser's Economics 307 class stationed themselves in hourly watches at this intersection armed only with pencil, pad and perseverance last Wednesday night, March 26, until 6 p.m. Statistically, they found that from these hours, with the exception of the hour from 12 a. m. to 1 p. m., 9,948 vehicles crossed the intersection and that the busiest hour was from 4 to 5 p. m. when 1,328 cars crossed the checking point.

Evidently drivers were taking the advice of Horace Greely about going west, as 2,663 westbound cars were counted, while 2,619 eastbound bound "knights of the road" were returning from that direction.

As though they feared that winter was beginning all over again, 2,555 automobiles headed south, while only 2,126 motorists took off for the northland.

This check, according to Dr. Maser, was part of a regular course assignment, and when the results are officially tabulated, the members of the class will make charts showing the trends of the traffic.

The townspeople were especially curious about this check, and with usual public reaction, they chose to guess what the check was for rather than ask the checker.

While waiting for a bus, the writer heard the following remark: "This is the last day for drivers to get their new state license, and those people are checking on them." They're probably looking for a stolen car and are checking the out-of-state licenses.

"It is a traffic check to see if an electric stop is needed." And one grizzled old veteran said grimly, "They're a-lookin' for somebody."

A suspicious taxi-driver even suspected his boss of stationing the checkers on the corner to see how many times his cabs rounded the corner, or some was suggested, how many wheels they went around on.

Doris Sims, a student from Murphysboro, who helped check the automobiles, said that she stood there on the corner so long, fellow students thought she had missed her bus and offered her a ride to school.

And in case you are wondering which corner to stay away from at what time, avoid south-bound traffic between 4 p. m. and 5 p. m. as 370 cars passed this spot. The name "Egypt" started like this: Where are you bound?" asked one farmer from Central Illinois. "We are the sons of Jacob going to Egypt to buy corn," was the answer. The nickname stuck. Even the geography of Southern Illinois resembles that of the Nile River lands.

REORGANIZATION
AUTHORITY COMING
HERE THIS MONTH

A nationally known authority on school reorganization will be brought to Southern Illinois in April to serve as a special consultant to county superintendents, survey committees and others interested in school reorganization.

The University will bring Dr. E. L. Kirkpatrick of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the Rural Youth of the United States of America and a prominent rural sociologist, to spend several days in conferences with groups in the three "blocks" of Southern Illinois.

Making Dr. Kirkpatrick's services available is the latest in the University's long series of contributions to efforts to help Southern Illinois solve rural school reorganization problems, Dean Fair pointed out.

"One of the most important problems facing Illinois today is the reorganization of rural school districts into larger administrative units through the abolition of the one-room school with the very small high school, replacing these with much larger schools," he explained.

Publish Summer Bulletin This week
Workshops, both on and off campus, will be conducted by students to supplement the regular program for the 1947 Summer Session, scheduled to run eight weeks from June 16 to August 8, according to the summer bulletin issued this week by the University.

Short courses, seminars, and other special offerings will be made available during the month of August, particularly for veterans.

A total of 122 courses in the three undergraduate colleges—liberal arts and sciences, vocations and professions, and education—and the Graduate School are already listed for the summer term.

Two rural education workshops, one on-campus and the other to be held at Salem, are already scheduled, with others tentatively planned. A public health education workshop, held last summer, will be repeated, and a new workshop on child growth and development will be held for the first time.

Summer bulletins containing schedules of these classes can be obtained by writing or calling at the registrar's office here at the University.

The Eleventh Annual Summer Conference of the Parent-Teacher Association and the annual educational exhibit of textbooks and instructional materials will again be held during the summer.

SCHOOL BILLS INTRODUCED
Legislation to grant substantial increases in state aid to public schools, was submitted yesterday in both houses of the Illinois General Assembly.
The measures would increase state equalization payments to $120 per pupil and flat grants to $25 for each grade school and $110 for each high school student. Equalization grants now are based on $80 for grade and $90 for high school students. Flat grants are $6 less than the proposed levels.
A total of 1,087 students, 78 percent of these veterans, are enrolled at the University of Illinois at Champaign division for the spring term, university officials announced today.
The enrollment is more than double that of the initial term last fall, and prospects are that it will be doubled again next fall, officials said.
